Instructions:

 Make body parts first, then make the body.

 The body is worked in the round first, then switches to back and forth while changing colors and slip stitching as needed. This is to ensure that the color lines don't slant. It also eliminates a ton of cutting/knotting or need to carry the yarn through. It's basically the same as working a flat row, you just slip stitch once you get to the end of the previous row.
